INTERNATIONAL TRADE IN BREAD AND COARSE GRAINS

World Exports by Countries Of Origin and Destination

Foreign Agricultural Service
UNITED STATES DEPARTMENT OF AGRICULTURE

PREFACE

The world's annual export movement of bread and coarse grains from surplus to deficit producing countries has been an outstanding feature of international trade down through the centuries. The grains under reference are wheat, rye, corn, oats, barley and grain sorghums. Production for export has now reached such proportions that competition for export outlets is keener today than at any time in history. This bulletin reveals the actual levels of such competition during each of the five years ending with 1955-56 compared with the quantities moved into export channels in earlier years, running back to 1909-13.

A large part of the human race depends on bread and coarse grains for the bulk of its food intake, consuming them either directly in the form of porridge, bread and other baked products and beverages, or indirectly in the form of livestock and meat products. While no one grain is used exclusively for one single purpose, wheat and rye are used mainly for human food and corn, oats, barley and grain sorghums mainly for feeding livestock.

Approximately 1.2 billion out of the 3.3 billion acres of arable land in the world are devoted to the production of bread and coarse grains. Production and marketing of these grains constitutes an important part of the agricultural economy of every country in the world. Every month of the year, in some farming area or another, a golden harvest of these grains is moving to market. Millions of farmers throughout the world depend upon them as the main source of their income.

Yet there is no one country where production and consumption are so nicely balanced that the country concerned does not either have to import or to export some of these grains. In fact, no single group of commodities plays a more important role in international political and economic relations generally. The share of the world's annual production moving into export channels ranges between 15 and 17 percent for wheat, around 10 percent for barley, and 3 percent for corn. For rye, oats and grain sorghums, the export share is less than 3 percent, these being largely stay-at-home crops.

For a number of countries, export sales of bread and coarse grains in foreign markets constitute the principal source of their foreign exchange earnings. By the same token, imports of such grains constitute in the aggregate the principal debit item in the international balance of payments of most of the deficit producing countries of the world.

The importance of these grains in international trade stems not only from the worldwide demand for food and feed but also from the fact that many countries have not been endowed with soil and climatic conditions requisite for their production on an economic basis. This is especially true of wheat and corn. Even many of the countries which have been thus endowed are unable to produce all that they consume because of population and other pressures for use of the land. Their deficits must be offset by imports. This is particularly true of most European countries.

Taken as a geographical unit, Europe as a whole is not only the world's largest producing but also the world's largest importing area for all of the bread and coarse grains except grain sorghums. In the latter instance, Asia is the largest producer but Europe usually runs a close second with Asia for first place as the largest importing area.

On the other hand, there are a number of countries where large-scale production of bread and coarse grains is not only favored by soil and climatic conditions but where production costs, advances in production technique, mechanization and relatively sparse populations per unit of land area, have facilitated the production of far more than is needed for domestic requirements. Outstanding in this group are the United States, Canada, Australia and Argentina. Their surpluses compete for export outlets in the deficit producing areas of the world. At present, approximately 80 percent of the bread grains and 70 percent of the coarse grains entering export channels originate in these four countries.

The world's total export movement of these grains reached 44.5 million long tons in 1955-56, an all time record. To move that huge quantity in ocean-going vessels would require 4,450 ships with an average carrying capacity of 10,000 tons each. Today's world export movement is a far cry from that of ancient Egypt and Macedonia when such surpluses as they possessed had to be moved on camel backs or on flotillas of barges down the waterways of the Nile, the Tigris and the Euphrates to seaport markets where they were bartered for goods from other nations.

While reasonably complete details with respect to the world's export movement during 1956-57 will not be available until well into 1958, current indications are that the total may prove to have reached still another new record, perhaps as high as 48 million tons. Preliminary estimates of the world's 1956-57 exports in millions of long tons, compared with those for 1955-56 shown in parentheses, are as follows: wheat, 32.4 (27.8); rye, 1.3 (1.2); corn, 5.6 (5.5); oats, 1.4 (1.2); barley, 6.3 (6.4); and grain sorghums, 1.2 (2.3).

Determination of the levels of competition which United States producers and exporters of bread and coarse grains are meeting or are likely to meet in world markets is one of the primary functions of the Foreign Competition Branch, Grain and Feed Division, Foreign Agricultural Service. This involves providing historical and current data on world imports and exports by countries of origin and destination. It also involves estimating, largely on the basis of production, supply and demand information transmitted by the Department's Agricultural Attaches, the import requirements and export availabilities of deficit and surplus producing countries and the levels of competition which United States bread and coarse grains are likely to meet in world markets from other producing areas.

Such information is prepared for dissemination to the nation's bread and coarse grain producing and trading interests, research institutions, trade journals, libraries and the general public through the usual Departmental media of news dissemination. Those interested in being placed on the mailing list for such information should write to the Director, Foreign Market Information Division, Foreign Agricultural Service, United States Department of Agriculture, Washington 25, D. C.

1/ Prewar average figures (compiled from Grain Bulletin No. 10, Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, Washington, D.C., January, 1949) include wheat flour, cornmeal and oatmeal in terms of grain. Those for 1939-40 through 1944-45 (compiled from Boletín Estadística Agropecuaria) include wheat flour in terms of grain but exclude cornmeal and oatmeal, exports of which were insignificant. Those for 1945-46 through 1955-56 (compiled from El Cerealista) exclude cornmeal and oatmeal through 1955-56 and flour through 1952-53. Exports of flour (compiled from Review of the River Plate) are included for the 3-year period ending with 1955-56

2/ Less than 500 tons.

1/ Compiled from 1931 Yearbook, USDA.

2/ Includes exports of flour milled in bond. Such flour exports were insignificant prior to World War I.

3/ Data not available.

4/ Compiled from 1953 Yearbook, USDA.

5/ Canada's total exports of wheat have been reduced by the quantities shown in U.S. Bureau of the Census figures as having been milled in bond and exported by the United States. This adjustment was necessary in order to avoid double counting and to permit a determination of actual destinations of exports.

6/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other countries taken from 1954 Trade Yearbook, Food and Agriculture Organization, United Nations.

7/ Residual.

8/ World totals for sorghums for 1934-35/1938-39 and 1945-46/1949-50 are averages for calendar 1934-38 and 1946-50, as published in 1954 Trade Yearbook, FAO.

9/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. World totals, except for oats, compiled from FAO Grain Bulletin No. 10 and from FAO Trade Yearbooks for 1948 and 1952.

10/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports for "Others" are based on the monthly import and export data of the various countries to the extent available, and on such supplementary sources as reports from U.S. Agricultural Attachés and other foreign service officers of the U.S. Government stationed abroad, Food and Agriculture Organization, trade reports and available information on trade agreements.

11/ Subject to revision as more complete data becomes available.

^{1/} Many countries do not report their grain exports by countries of destination on a monthly basis. In fact, some of them do not report their exports at all. In such instances, dependence had to be placed on a number of supplementary sources. These included official publications of various importing countries showing monthly imports by countries of origin, on reports from United States Agricultural Attachés and other foreign service officers of the United States Government stationed abroad, on reports published by the Food and Agriculture and other agencies of the United Nations, and on reports published by commercial agencies in foreign countries.

^{2/} Destination not reported.

^{3/} Preliminary and subject to revision.

1/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other countries taken from 1954 Trade Yearbook, Food and Agriculture Organization, United Nations.

2/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other areas are based on the official monthly import and export data of the various countries to the extent available, and on such supplementary sources as reports from U.S. Agricultural Attachés and other foreign service officers of the U.S. Government stationed abroad, Food and Agriculture Organization, trade reports, and available information on trade agreements.

3/ Includes exports of flour milled in bond.

4/ Canadian wheat exports reduced by quantities shown in U.S. Bureau of Census figures as having been milled in bond and exported by the United States. This adjustment was necessary in order to avoid double counting and to permit a determination of actual destinations of exports.

5/ Prewar average includes all of Germany as then constituted.

6/ 2-year average.

7/ 4-year average.

1/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other countries taken from 1954 Trade Yearbook, Food and Agriculture Organization, United Nations.

2/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other areas are based on the official monthly import and export data of the various countries to the extent available, and on such supplementary sources as reports from U. S. Agricultural Attachés and other foreign service officers of the U. S. Government stationed abroad, Food and Agriculture Organization, trade reports, and available information on trade agreements.

3/ Prewar average includes all of Germany as then constituted.

1/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other countries taken from 1954 Trade Yearbook, Food and Agriculture Organization, United Nations.

2/ Big IV exports compiled from official records of those countries. Exports from other areas are based on the official monthly import and export data of the various countries to the extent available, and on such supplementary sources as reports from U.S. Agricultural Attachés and other foreign service officers of the U. S. Government stationed abroad, Food and Agriculture Organization, trade reports, and available information on trade agreements.

3/ Frewar average includes all of Germany as then constituted.

No official figures are available that would make possible a tabulation showing the destinations by marketing years (July-June) of sorghum exports from countries other than the United States and Australia. It is, therefore, impossible to give more than a very incomplete picture of sorghum exports from other countries. In this tabulation, the column headed "Australia and others" includes the officially published export figures of Australia plus a residual for other countries. This residual was arrived at by deducting from Food and Agriculture figures showing total imports of "Millet and Sorghum" by a number of countries the officially reported exports of the United States and Australia to those countries and including the residual in the indicated column.
